Living in a country like Singapore, where it is sunny practically all year round, most of us find ourselves constantly struggling with skin problems like dark spots and uneven skin tone. Whitening skin products and sunblocks make up the staple skin diet of most women here. Some take things a step further by constantly making trips down to beauty salons for in-salon treatments. There are so many products on the shelves and treatments in salons that target hyper-pigmentation and sun damage so what sets FluorOxygen+C aside – what makes it the treatment?

The skin is the largest organ and a very complex one at that. Designed to protect out bodies from the environment, the skin gets hit the hardest and suffers wear and tear over the years as a result of constant exposure to harmful external factors such as UVA and UVB radiation. FluorOxygen+C works not only internally but also externally in treating and preventing the various effects of photo-damage, sun-damage and hyper-pigmentation.

Internally, the formula encourages simultaneous cell division to create a well-defined, consistent layer so that skin looks even on the surface. Because the treatment comprises of optimal levels of Vitamin C, it allows for the breakdown of free radicals and reinforces antioxidant powers. The presence of Glycolic Acid increases the synthesis of collagen and elastin, which aids in the anti-ageing process. Externally, the treatment moisturises, rejuvenates and lightens areas of skin that have been damaged thus making the problem areas less noticeable to the eye. Contents of FluorOxygen+C are aimed at revitalising damaged skin while its exfoliating properties provide gentle but effective anti-ageing and lightening effects. Basically, the formula works from the outside in – unlike treatments where nutrients are introduced directly into the inner dermal layers – and then from the inside out, which is why the treatment not only boasts short term but also long term benefits.

Short term benefits that users can look forward to include the reduction of skin discolouration, inhibition of melanin production and a fairer and more radiant complexion. In the long run, improvements such as the elimination of skin discolouration, intense correction of sun damage at the cellular level and improvement of the skin tone become more noticeable.

The FluorOxygen+C treatment comes in 8 steps complete with a home maintenance range to prolong the effects of the treatment and provide an ongoing preventative care for skin. The synergy between the in-salon and home treatment allows for better effectiveness and more visible results – fairer, revitalised skin. The first three steps make up the cleansing step whereby the surface of the skin is cleansed and deeply yet gently exfoliated. In step four, skin is lightened and toned before the soothing step (comprising of steps five to seven) takes place so that skin can be hydrated, revitalised and placed in a relaxed state. The last step of the in-salon treatment will rejuvenate skin so that customers leave the salon with lighter, brighter and more vibrant skin. Comprising of a couple of creams and serums and designed to work hand-in-hand with the salon treatments, FluorOxygen+C home treatments are important in obtaining long-lasting results.

The FluorOxygen+C treatment is created based on dermatological formulations that have been scientifically supported and combines the benefits of the most advanced and powerful ingredients to restore skin to its natural state, by first repairing damage caused by the sun, photo-ageing and other harsh environmental factors. Besides acting as a shield against harmful external influences, the multi-dimensional treatment has skin rejuvenating and anti-ageing properties that increases skin's elasticity, oxygen consumption for generally younger and more radiant looking skin.
